6. A fenced-in area with obstacle courses was on the opposite side of the road across from the settlement. This installation was used for training Polish military dogs. A unit of 50 soldiers with about 50 dogs led by a mounted captain moved almost daily to the area arriving from the town. Some of the dogs carried small boxes at both sides of their bodies.

Miscellaneous.

7, Source learned in July 1950 that the Grossmoellen (0.55/M k5) seaside resort was declared a restricted area. It was guarded by Soviet sentries. Persons entering the area were required to have a certificate issued by a komendature in Stettin (0.50/0.55) and other identification papers. Source learned from acquaintances that the seaside area could be entered only by special Soviet permission.

Comment. Another resettler confirmed Soviet troops in Swinemuende-Bad until March 1951. The weapons in the area southwest of the Swinemuende-Bad railroad station mentioned in the reference report probably belong to a Soviet depot which was guarded by personnel of the guard battalion mentioned in the present report.
